on Twitter

A strong advocate for advancing the scope of pharmacy practice, Dr. Davis is a leader in national professional organizations, including past president of the Society of Infectious Diseases Pharmacists, and served as an invited member of the National Institutes of Health COVID-19 Treatment Guidelines Panel.

Dr. Davis is frequently tapped by the media for her expertise. She has been invited to lecture and present her research to clinicians and scientists on an international scale, and has received awards for practice, service, and research from local and national societies.

An anchor in urban health care since 1891

As one of the founding colleges of Wayne State University, the Eugene Applebaum College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences is built on 100 years of tradition and innovation in the heart of Detroit. We have grown deep roots in our city, harnessing its powerhouse hospital systems and community service organizations as vibrant, real-world training grounds for our students. And our research at all levels – from undergraduates to veteran faculty members – translates into creative solutions for healthier communities.

Sidney Barthwell Sr. '29

The ambitious Sidney Barthwell Sr. opened his first pharmacy at the height of the Great Depression in 1933 and provided much-needed work for many Black Detroit residents – a long-term focus of his socially conscious career. Barthwell Drugs soon became the largest Black-owned chain of drugstores in the United States.

Eugene Applebaum '60

After growing Arbor Drugs over three decades, Eugene Applebaum sold the business to CVS, dedicating himself to strengthening his hometown of Detroit through philanthropy. With his alma mater as a pivotal focus, Applebaum's generosity led to the eponymous state-of-the-art building our college calls home.
